

Welcome to the Jefferson Patterson Park and Museum Audio Tour

Walking in their Footsteps: A Patuxent Community

On this tour, you will hear how Native Americans lived long ago. This information will be shared by experts who have spent years piecing together what a village may have looked like along the Patuxent River when the first European settlers arrived. They include archaeologists, historians, and other scholars as well as the descendants of the original inhabitants of the area. Much effort and time has gone into creating this project through a partnership between the Huntingtown High School 2009-10 Archaeology Class and the State Museum of Archaeology.

As you walk through the Native American Village we hope you can see the differences between how Native Americans live today, and how they lived long ago. We thank you for taking the time to experience this tour, and hope this will be an enjoyable learning experience for all.

This audio tour was made possible through the generous support of Boeing, the Friends of JPPM, Garrett Music Academy, an Anonymous Donor and the Calvert County Public Schools. All music was composed and performed by Jan Seiden of Flute Journey Records. More information about the artist and music may be found at www.JanSeiden.com.
